Message of congratulations to graduates of Sofia Medical University

Comhghairdeas mór le gach duine atá ag bronnadh céime inniu. Congratulations to everyone who is graduating today, especially to my fellow Irish countrywomen and men. Today marks the end of one journey that started six years ago when you commenced your studies but it is also the threshold to the next stage in your life experience as you embark on your professional careers.

The pandemic that has confronted the global community in the past two years has given us a new appreciation of the vital work of medical personnel in securing the health and wellbeing of our societies. You are graduating at an exciting time when our scientific knowledge has reached a point where new vaccines can be developed, made and administered in an incredibly short time. Who knows what medical advances are around the corner? But you can all look forward to improving the lives of others and I wish you every success in your future endeavours.
